The monograph presents the main events in the career of the people's leader. The development of Lincoln's character and the growth of his powers from boyhood through his work at the Bar, and as a leader in the political contests that preceded the war for the restriction of slavery, and his final service to the country as War President and commander-in-chief of its forces, are recorded in outline, but with such measure of comprehensiveness as serves to make the picture and record practically complete.

From Robert Lincoln

"I shall preserve this volume as one of the most treasured of those relating to my father. . . . Your narrative is full of interest and of freshness and I have read it throughout with the greatest pleasure."

From John Bigelow

"I have read with much interest your account of the life of Lincoln and of the issues in which Lincoln was leader. I congratulate you upon your ability to handle the pen as effectively as the sword."

From Henry Haynie

"A grand subject has in this volume been treated in an eloquent and thoughtful manner . . . The monograph is the masterful work of the studious man whose books have placed him high among men of letters. . . . The volume is to me especially valuable because of the personal note contained in it."

From George M. Trevelyan

"Just the book I wanted. I find it most valuable in the importance of its information and most attractive in the form of presentation."

From Edward Clodd

"I have read the book through from title page to colophon and I find myself greatly interested and not a little moved for the heroism and pathos that are in the story. It has refreshed my memory as to the causes of the War. . . . To have been an actor in the tragic drama imports into the narrative vividness and the charm of personal worth."

From H. M. Alden, editor of Harper's Monthly

"I have gone through this volume in a rapidly devouring way. It is what I should have expected of the author, but in the reality of the presentment, it even surpasses my expectations."

From U. J. Hoffman

"The volume is a distinct contribution to Lincoln literature. The flavor given by the personal knowledge of the author is delightful. . . . I feel distinctly richer in having read this delightful book. The Cooper Institute speech and the constitutional notes are particularly valuable for any one interested in the problems of the Civil War."

“It is rarely that the House of Putnam, which has a peculiarly wide and varied output, has given to the public so interesting a book. Major Putnam’s experience was in itself unusual. There are now living few men who passed through one like it, and perhaps none who could recount it in so satisfying a manner. . . . The most striking feature of the Major’s narrative is the humane spirit in which it is told. . . . It is well for the citizens of to-day, to whom the war for the Union is but a matter of written history, to realise that but for the service of men like Major Putnam there would have been no country such as ours now is in which to live in peace and security.”—*N. Abraham Lincoln

From the London Spectator

"This volume has qualities of its own, which make it stand out among the many books that have been called forth by the Lincoln Centenary. The author's recollections go back to the critical time that preceded the outbreak of the Civil War. . . . Now, when nearly half a century has passed, Mr. Putnam states with admirable clearness, his estimate of the great President and of his policy. . . . The personal reminiscences of the author constitute a special interest for the book. It is impossible, even after all these years, to read with dry eyes the story of the ten thousand veterans who were sobbing together on receiving the news of the death of the great Captain."

From the London Bookseller

"George H. Putnam is one of the few publishers who is nearly as well known as an author. . . . As his previous books have shown, he knows how to write with vigor and effect. . . . This book has a special interest in presenting personal experiences of the War and possesses also a unique value in presenting the revised text of Lincoln's famous Cooper Union Address with an introduction and notes on the constitutional issues of the War. Mr. Putnam's vivid and vigorous appreciation of the great Leader and his clearly presented narrative of the events of the time make, with the record of this great speech, a volume of exceptional value and interest."

From the Norfolk Pilot

"No southern man can read the pages of Dr. Putnam's biographical study without doing homage to the liberality of sentiment that is conjoined with the author's strength of conviction."

From the Cleveland Leader

"A comprehensive study of the life and character of Lincoln, presented in a direct and attractive manner, and with decided charm of style. . . . One of the most valuable books that has yet been brought into print concerning the great Captain."

From the Cincinnati Times Star

"A volume that is rich in historical data and in distinctive views of the deeds of the great American. It constitutes a real addition to the history of the country."

From the London Times

"Dr. Putnam's volume presents an enthusiastic tribute to the qualities of Lincoln as a man, as a statesman and as the people's Leader. . . . More than all, it is the tribute of a soldier to the military abilities of the great President. . . . The book is attractively written, with a pleasant sense of humor and with an intimate knowledge of many of the events and of the chief actors in a story which must always remain fascinating reading."

From the New York Sun

"An admirable piece of work that constitutes a distinctive addition to the increasing mass of Lincoln literature."
